

Riverside

Compiled by Pat Nightingale

The building on plot no. 452, described as a coal pen, no longer exists, but at the time was owned by John Cheeseman and occupied by Thomas Budd.

The building on plot no. 453, described as a house and garden, similarly no longer exists, but at the time was owned by John Cheeseman and occupied by Thomas Budd. Occupying the site now is Riverside House which was first mentioned by Dr Bloxam in his 1881 Census as 'Budd's New House' together with three adjacent cottages. They can all be seen in the photograph below, c.1900.
